

Sustainable development goal :- Good health and wellbeing

I discussed education goal in my previous report. I think health and wellbeing for all is closer to being achieved. In France free healthcare for all is implemented (Universal healthcare). Personally I think free healthcare for children should have a higher priority because these children are not at fault if they are born poor, and have a long life in front of them. If a child dies because of poor health facilities it is the collective failure of humanity as a race.

Health and well-being should not only be restricted to humans though efforts should be made to protect other living organisms from man made effects.

I say that India is at a better state in health care than education because we have eradicated polio, tamed Tuberculosis and AIDS. Definitely a reason to be proud of. But a lot of work is still left we need to control the three major diseases in India Hypertension, Diabetes and cancer. A major cause of these diseases is widespread use of tobacco in particularly poor section of the society. Other major cause of these diseases is also sedentary lifestyle. I think such awareness campaigns are a part of implementing public healthcare.

Future Challenges :- As the world apparently observes now many western countries are facing the problem of drugs some countries have resorted to decriminalization of drugs in order to treat their affected citizens. So, what can India do to not fall into this same problem. I think India can avert a similar situation by having the family system that we have where people never feel alone as and go towards drugs. Also strict laws should be imposed to prevent drugs trafficking should be imposed.

Apart from the drug problem. Other factors like soon the global population would start to decrease, introduction of AI all are reasons to think that there would be a boost in healthcare. But we must give this newfound technology the right direction towards development of collective good and not towards waging war.
